SPC Retail Display Group Relocates to Chino, CA

August 18 (Chino, CA) – To better serve customers, and position themselves for continued growth, the SPC Retail Display Group (until recently known as the Sam Pievac Company, and SPC), has moved their corporate offices, main warehouse and distribution center to Chino, CA.

The move to a 100,362 square foot facility in Chino, CA., from a 63,000 sq. ft. facility in Santa Fe Springs, CA, enables SPC to assemble, store, stage and ship larger rollout requests for retail store fixture and POP displays. There's also more office space to accommodate staff increases that already have, and will continue to occur, including those associated with expanded design, CAD, engineering and prototype reviewing departments. The company continues to operate a 500,000-square-foot manufacturing plant in Xiamen, China.

According to Mr. Ty Van Cuick, Customer Service and Sales Support Manager for SPC Retail Display Group - "We've simply outgrown our space. In addition, we just completed celebrating our 50th Anniversary, and we know we need to prepare for the continued growth and expansion we're planning to have over the next 50 years. This new facility enables us to do so quickly, efficiently, and, particularly in today's climate, very economically. It's a tremendous move for SPC, and one that will prove just as valuable to our many customers."
